

My Priorities Pyramid

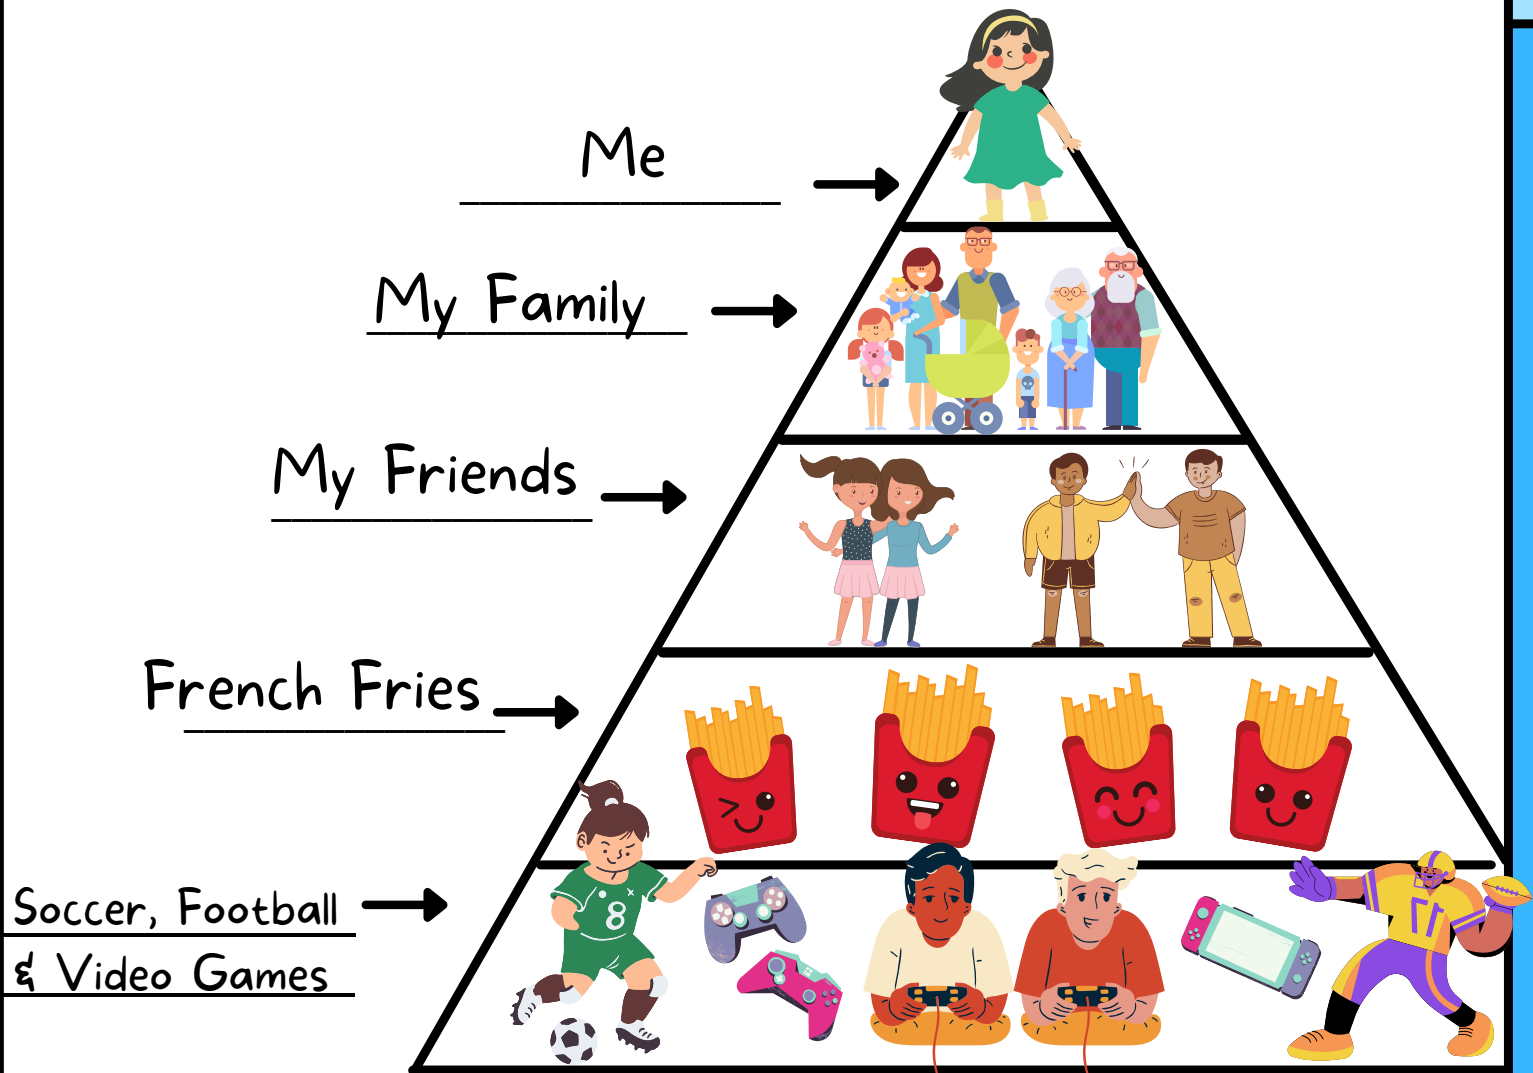

Your priorities are what you think is most important. The things you find most important get more attention, effort and love. Write the things that are important to you. Put things less important on the bottom and the one, most loved thing up top. Then draw the different things in the correct area:

Think about what you chose above. Do you give a lot of attention to your favorites and not enough to the others? When you pick a lower one over a higher one does it hurt you or help you?

The CREATE Pyramid

These are the priorities that we find most important at CREATE. We give these most important things more attention and love. Check out our Pyramid as an example:

Think about what you wrote above. Do you give a lot of attention to your favorites and not enough to others? How can that hurt or help the different things above it?

I spend a lot of time with my friends after school and have less time with my family or by myself. If I keep doing that I might not have enough time for soccer practice. I might not have enough time by myself so I won't decide my own interests or find new hobbies.
